J.D. COURSES

Law 0570: Accounting for Lawyers (Homer) 2 credit. ONLINE
T 6:00-7:50 pm & TH 6:00-7:50 pm. Exam Course.

The course is designed to simplify the accounting process and instill confidence in students that they can handle situations where accounting and finances come into play. The course will explain the accounting process from original entry to the production of financial statements; it will critically examine evolving accounting standards and procedures; students will learn to analyze financial statements; the importance of the time value of money, and the various liabilities that will be of importance to them; and accounting problems. Finally, students will learn about accounting systems and the importance of internal control. The course is designed for students who have no previous study of accounting but who plan to engage in commercial, corporate, tax, or any legal practice where finances are an issue.

Law 0695: Renewable Energy Law, Regulation and Policy (Hurwitz) 2 credits. ONLINE
T 6:00-7:50 pm & TH 6:00-7:50 pm. Exam Course.

This course will explore issues relating to renewable energy in the electricity and transportation sectors, the two sectors of the domestic economy that make the greatest contributions to domestic greenhouse gas emissions. The course will cover solar and wind generation technologies and the issues involved in developing, siting, and integrating them into the U.S. electricity grid. The course will review the major renewable energy laws and regulations designed to promote renewable generation resources, including federal tax subsidies, state renewable portfolio standards, the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of 1978 and net metering. The class will consider the intermittent character of wind and solar resources, and the policy and legal aspects of possible ways to overcome this phenomenon, including an examination of electricity storage and smartgrid applications. In light of the locational constraints of wind resources, key regulatory issues affecting transmission access will be addressed, as will rooftop solar, in consideration of its potential role as a distribution-level resource. Turning to the transportation sector, the course will examine recent developments as to corporate average fuel efficiency and tailpipe emission standards and the California waiver. The course will also consider vehicle electrification (widespread market integration of electric vehicles) as a strategy to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Law 1015: Artificial Intelligence Law (Bollinger) 3 credits. ONLINE
M 6:00-7:50 pm & W 6:00-7:50 pm. Serial Writing Seminar - 18 students.

AI attempts to replicate human intelligence in a machine so the machine can perform tasks that typically require human intelligence. Based on the capacity to mimic human characteristics, the technology used, the real-world applications, and the theory of the mind, AI is focused into goal-oriented abilities designed to perform specific tasks, or AI abilities that are in parity with human abilities, or AI abilities that are more capable than a human. Lawyers are presented with issues related to: autonomous vehicles; medical devices (e.g., microchip implants in humans, ingestible pills), medical diagnosis, and health/medical care; reducing energy use; improving cybersecurity; new methods of climate and environmental protection; a safer society; "deep fakes" used to spread disinformation; bias in AI analysis and its impacts on marginalized groups (e.g., employment, setting bail, and criminal sentencing); AI and IP (AI as inventor or author, and IP protection for AI); AI and social media, especially with respect to data mining and privacy concerns; AI in law practice and law firm management; implications of AI for employment; AI and legal decision-making for claims for benefits such as social security disability or workers compensation; and AI affecting finance, transportation, national security, advertising, and a variety of other fields. The governance of AI is aimed at ensuring AI's numerous potential benefits while minimizing risks to consumers' health, safety, security, and privacy is only beginning. Lawyers, policymakers, and risk management professionals must address governance issues with respect to development, deployment and use of AI applications.

2022 PHILADELPHIA SUMMER SESSION

Law 1098: Legal Research and Writing III: Civil Motions Practice (Levy) 3 credits. ONLINE
M 6:00-7:50 pm & W 6:00-7:50 pm. Serial Writing Seminar - 18 students.

This writing seminar is designed to provide an in-depth understanding of the primary pre-trial motions used during the course of civil litigation, including: 1) motions to dismiss/preliminary objections, 2) discovery motions, 3) motions in limine, and 4) Frye/Daubert motions challenging expert testimony. Both the Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure and local procedural rules governing motions practice will be examined. Emphasis will be placed on the purpose behind the various motions as well as how to effectively draft those motions for use in civil litigation.

GRADUATE TAX LLM COURSES -

Graduate Tax courses are open to JD Students, but permission from Professor Andy Weiner is required EMAIL: weiner@temple.edu

Graduate Tax Law G531: Tax Procedure (Grossberg) 2 credits. ONLINE
M 6:00-8:20 pm (classes ends 7/25). Exam Course – 20 students.
Prerequisite: Law 600 (Taxation).

This course will provide an overview of tax controversies before the Internal Revenue Service during the administrative stage through the commencement of litigation. Taught from a practical perspective, students will learn how to resolve disputes over what is often clients' largest expense -- taxes. Students will examine statutes, regulations, and case law, and they will participate in simulated exercises involving mock IRS notices and transcripts. The course will cover the assessment of tax deficiencies, civil penalties, statute of limitation issues, tax collection issues, claims for refund, discharging taxes in bankruptcy, appeals conferences, joint liability issues, trust fund assessments, obligations of practitioners, and taxpayers' rights. At the end of this course, students should understand: 1) the organizational structure and authority of the Internal Revenue Service in administering the Internal Revenue Code and collecting federal taxes, 2) the procedural rights of taxpayers to contest a proposed assessment and claim for refund, 3) taxpayer options in resolving collection issues and contesting unreasonable enforcement actions, and 4) how to strategically think about a taxpayer's case to resolve a pending tax issue and minimize his/her exposure to additional civil tax issues (and potential criminal issues) before the Internal Revenue Service.

Graduate Tax Law G807: Professional Conduct in Tax Practice (Gulia) 3 credits. ONLINE
T 6:00-8:20 pm (classes ends 7/26) Writing course - 20 students.
This course does not satisfy the JD graduation writing requirement.
Prerequisites: Law 600 (Taxation), Law 416 (Professional Responsibility)

In the typical contexts of most tax practitioners (that is, advice rather than litigation, and, for an accountant, advice rather than audit or another assurance examination), the essential professional-conduct principles and rules are about the same for lawyers, accountants, and actuaries. Moreover, each kind of professional can learn more about how to interpret her profession's rules by studying another profession's rules. In this course, a student will take a focused look at how professional-conduct norms apply in specific contexts of tax practice. Using what you learn, you can spot difficult professional-conduct problems and be prepared to manage them with confidence. (Research writing seminar, no exam)

Graduate Tax Law G534: State & Local Tax Controversy (Liss & Karpchuk) 2 credits. ONLINE
W 6:00-8:20 pm (classes ends 7/27). Exam Course – 20 students.
Prerequisite: Law 600 (Taxation).

This course will examine state and local tax controversies, including audits, administrative and judicial appeals, and important constitutional challenges related to state and local taxes. The first half of the course will focus on managing a state tax audit examination and challenging an audit assessment through the appeals process. Students will analyze common corporate income tax and sales and use tax issues raised in audit examinations. They will also learn the benefits of voluntary disclosure agreements and amnesty programs as options for coming into compliance with state and local tax filing obligations. The second half of the course will focus on constitutional challenges to current state and local tax issues, including issues related to the Commerce Clause, Due Process Clause, Equal Protection Clause, Supremacy Clause and even the First Amendment, which can weave its way into state and local tax cases. This half of the course will also address the prospectivity, retroactivity and remedy that occur once a tax is found to be unconstitutional. Towards the end of the course, students will apply what they have learned throughout the semester in a mock administrative hearing.

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY BEASLEY SCHOOL OF LAW

ASYNCHRONOUS DISTANCE EDUCATION COURSES

JD students will be permitted to enroll in one course offered online in an asynchronous format, which provides students with some flexibility in scheduling the times when they will view the pre-recorded lectures and complete the assignments. Students will interact with the faculty member and other students through message boards, chat rooms, online faculty office hours and email.

In all asynchronous distance learning courses, weekly discussion board posts and weekly assignments, both of which will be completed online, will be graded both for substance and for timely completion. Check the course to see the weight of weekly assignments and the final exam which will be administered and completed online.

Students may enroll in only one of these courses during the summer 2022 session. Students who enroll in one of these courses may also take one of the other courses discussed above. The total number of credits taken in a summer may not exceed 6 credits.

Law 0524: Consumer Law – 3 credits (Porter) * Exam course.

Consumer Law examines contemporary consumer law, situating its statutes in the common law of tort and contract. The class is organized around a consumer transaction, including how businesses attract consumers, the terms of the products or services purchased, and the remedies or enforcement tools available if the deal goes awry. In addition to longstanding important topics such as unfair or deceptive acts and practices, warranties, and consumer credit law, the class examines how the consumer law landscape is changing. Issues include technological advances that raise privacy concerns; the increase in automobile debt and student loans; and the work of the newest federal agency, Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. This class will not be exclusively about “consumer protection” but instead will consider consumer law from multiple viewpoints, including those of businesses that are regulated by consumer law and those of policymakers who are charged with protecting the public interest in a fair marketplace.

Law 0549: Insurance Law – 3 credits (O'Brien) * Exam course.

Insurance Law is designed to introduce students to the basic principles governing the creation, sale and enforcement of the most common forms of insurance in the U.S. Students will be introduced to the following insurance lines: personal liability, professional liability, commercial general liability, homeowners, automobile, life and casualty and health. The peculiarities of each line will be discussed as well as the problems common to all lines: moral hazard, adverse selection and outright fraud. The social function of insurance as well as historical anomalies are covered in order to give the student the broadest possible exposure to the issues lawyers confront regularly in this area of practice.

Law 0444: National Security: Counterterrorism – 3 credits (Guiora) * Exam course.

National Security: Counterterrorism is an in-depth look at counterterrorism in the United States. Examines the competing conceptions and definitions of terrorism at the national level and the institutions and processes designed to execute the national security on terrorism. Includes the study of the balance between national security interests and civil liberties found in the following topical areas: relevant Supreme Court decisions, legislative provisions in response to acts of terrorism, operational counter-terrorism considerations (including targeted killing), intelligence gathering (including interrogations), policy recommendations, the use of military tribunals or civil courts in trying suspected terrorists, the emerging law regarding enemy combatants and their detention, and the arguable need for new self-defense doctrines at the global level.

Law 0589: Secured Transactions – 3 credits (Henning) * Exam course.

Secured Transactions is a study of personal and commercial financing by loans and credit sales under agreements creating security interests in the debtors' personal property (Article 9 of the UCC and relevant provisions of the Bankruptcy Code).

Law 0601: Sports Law – 3 credits (Marsh) * Exam course.

Sports Law considers issues in both intercollegiate and professional sports with an emphasis on constitutional law; tort and criminal law; antitrust, labor law, and other issues of law in the field of sports, such as considerations of Title IX, drug testing, violence, and the role of agents.

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY BEASLEY SCHOOL OF LAW
2022 PHILADELPHIA SUMMER SESSION

Law 5040: Survey of Legal Topic - Extended Bar Review 2– 3 credits * Exam course.

This course is designed to jumpstart your bar exam preparation by developing your substantive knowledge and sharpening your critical bar exam success skills. Specifically, you will receive in-depth review of highly tested topics in Contracts, Evidence, Torts and Real Property. You will then put that knowledge to use working through practice MBE and essay questions. You will learn how to develop a strong but flexible framework to resolve bar exam problems, sharpen your reading comprehension, issue identification, rule mastery, critical thinking, and legal analysis skills. Please note— this course is not intended to and does not replace the need for a complete commercial bar review course. To fully prepare for the bar exam, you should plan to take a complete commercial bar review course prior to the bar exam.
