

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY JAMES E. BEASLEY SCHOOL OF LAW

LAW SCHOOL FACILITIES

The law school facilities consist of three buildings: Klein, Barrack, and Shusterman Halls, all conveniently located within one block on Temple University's Main Campus.

1 - KLEIN HALL

Built in 1973, the Charles Klein Law Building is the main law school building and is where law students spend most of their time. At the center of our law school building is the law library, which offers a light-filled atrium. Six mock trial practice rooms are furnished with judicial benches, jury boxes, and video and audio equipment for use in the trial advocacy program. The Duane Morris LLP Moot Court Room provides space for moot court competitions, lectures, and meetings.

Klein Hall also houses the dean's office, the offices of full-time faculty members, and many other administrative offices. The first floor is home to a café, where students can get a cup of coffee, a snack, or sandwich before heading to class. The café stays open in the evenings for the convenience of our evening students, who often come to class straight from work.

2 - SHUSTERMAN HALL

Opened in 1997, Murray H. Shusterman Hall is a converted Gothic-style church. The building provides a conference center for law school symposia, meetings, and other gatherings.

3 - BARRACK HALL

Morris and Sylvia Barrack Hall opened its doors in spring 2002. Originally known as College Hall, this granite building was built in 1893 and served as the law school's first home when it was founded in 1895. The three-story building is the home of a spacious and comfortable student lounge, student organization offices, and smart classrooms, along with the Career Services Office, Academic Records, Student Affairs, and Admissions and Financial Aid Offices.

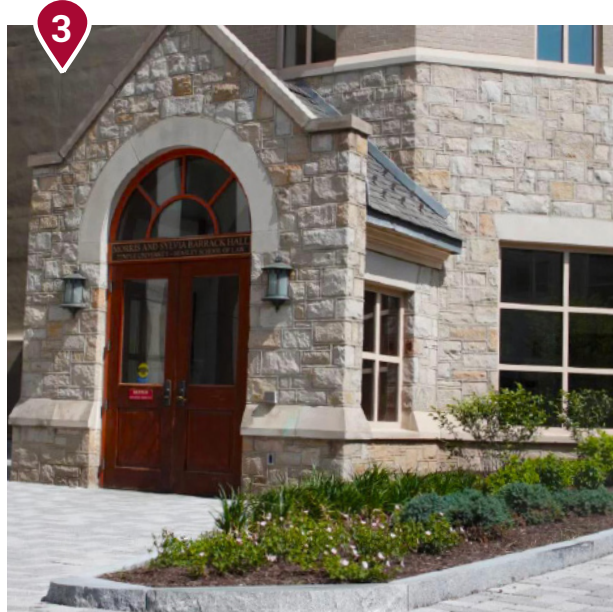

4 - LAW LIBRARY

With more than 600,000 volumes, Temple's law library is among the largest in the nation. The library spans the third to eighth floors of Klein Hall and includes seven levels of book stacks. Study carrels are on each level and there are two multilevel reading rooms. During the academic year, the library is open for day and evening hours seven days a week.

5 - LAW BOOKSTORE

The law school bookstore, Barnes & Noble, is across the street from Klein Hall on the northwest corner of Broad Street and Cecil B. Moore Avenue. In addition to offering a wide variety of both legal and non-legal books and Temple Law merchandise, the bookstore contains a Starbucks coffee bar and sandwich shop. A quiet seating area provides students with a place to sit, chat, and relax between classes.
